

Department of Psychology

Western Washington Medical Group (WWMG) is a well-established, multi-disciplinary medical practice in Everett, Washington. The Department of Psychology, operating within the larger medical group, has a unique model in which it allows individual providers to work independently with the benefit of collegial and administrative support. Providers can also enjoy collaborative relationships with other WWMG care centers.

Clinicians within our department have diverse interests and practices and serve both pediatric and adult populations. Working within the larger WWMG medical organization offers benefits to individual providers including referrals, marketing, billing services, scheduling support, administrative assistance, furnished offices, and a fun, cohesive team of supportive, easy-going, and talented providers.

Part- and full-time positions are available for experienced psychotherapists at both the masters and doctoral level practicing therapy across the lifespan. We are seeking therapists who practice as generalists as well as those holding expertise in a variety of specialty areas. The ideal applicant will be a skilled clinician with an understanding of business operations. Those without such experience but interested in learning about the business of running a practice will also be strongly considered.

Available positions are ideal for skilled therapists seeking to work within a thriving medical organization with benefits that include work independence, competitive pay on a production-based compensation model without the work, headaches, financial investment, or risk associated with running a private business.
